TO MISSION BEACH PROPERTY OWNERS

The following is a letter from Mr. G. H. P. Dellman, lighting sales engineer of the San Diego Consolidated Gas and Electric Co., which should explain away all doubts and fears:

Mr. Liftchild, Chairman Lighting Committee, Mission Beach Chamber of Commerce.

Dear Sir: Regarding the cost of installation of proposed ornamental lighting ystem at Mission Beach, it is estimated that this job will cost approximately $58,000.

This, divided over approximately 1800 lots 25x180, gives us a cost of approximately $30 per lot. Some of the lots are larger than this and, of course, will be assessed more, in proportion to the increase in size.

To determine more definitely the assessment on the larger lots, multiply the area by 15 mills. Very truly yours,

G. H. P. DELLMAN,
Lighting Sales Engineer.

This cost will be in ten annual payments if desired.

Real estate operators of experience believe the thorough lighting of Mission Beach will enhance the average value of the lots at least $250, and permit the people to promenade at night, give the beach an animated appearance leading to better acquaintance, and will give us such advertising with tourists that will equal the results of the most costly advertising.

TO PROPERTY OWNERS OF MISSION BOULEVARD LOTS

Though the city council passed an order to put in cement walks on all lots from the Amusement Center to Pacific avenue, upon the boulevard, City Manager Rhodes saw the injustice of it, when walks are in good condition, and gave orders to enforce this order only upon owners of lots whose sidewalks are not in good condition.

JEWELL STREET DESIRED AS PUBLIC ARTERY AT PACIFIC BEACH

Property owners in one section of Pacific Beach have petitioned the city council to keep open a thoroughfare known as "Jewell street," and declare it a public street. This property has, through long use, they assert, become a public artery, and can so legally be declared by the city.

W. H. Carter asserts that he has seen this "street" in use for twenty-five years, and R. D. Martin says that to his personal knowledge it has been traveled over by the public for thirty-two years. The roadway runs from Diamond street to Chalcedony street.

LIMITATION TO NUMBER OF VIEW LOTS SAYS JOHN P. MILLS

Strikingly emphasizing the fact that "there's only one crop of land" and when it passes into private ownership, "it's gone," special attention is directed by the famous realtor, John P. Mills, to another fact, that "there's only one Point Loma—and that's going!"

While some desirable residential properties may be found in all parts of California, Mr. Mills tells a most pointed truth when he states that there is a definite limitation to the number of unrivalled view lots on Point Loma, between San Diego bay and the Pacific ocean. He and his associates control a large share of such lots and they are being rapidly purchased by thoughtful investors, while values are steadily on the increase. Phone Main 3708 for Point Loma information.

CITY NOW WANTS POINT LOMA ACREAGE SOUGHT BY REALTORS

Congressman Phil Swing has written to Mayor Bacon that the result of his endeavors with the war department looks very favorable in connection with the city's efforts to obtain title to a tract of about twenty acres at the base of Point Loma. When the government dike was constructed to change the course of the San Diego river, this land was deeded to the war department for "public use," but never was put to any use. Realty men are anxious to secure the acreage for subdivision and the city wants it transferred back for park purposes.

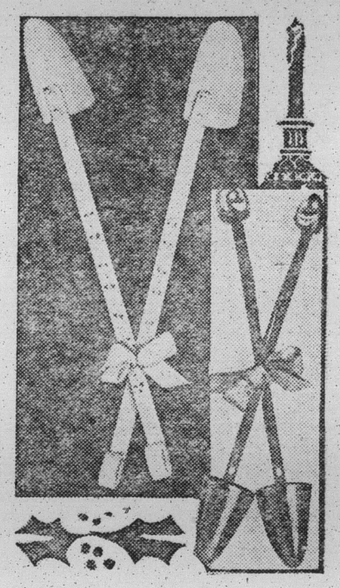
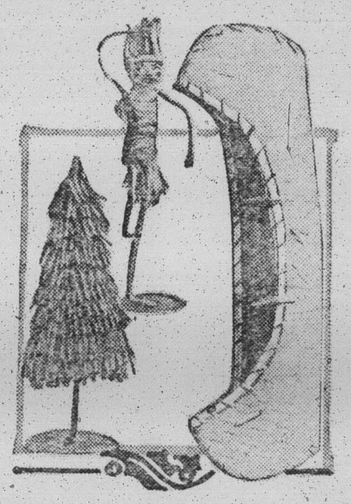
Nice Things for Christmas Gifts

Among Favorite Gifts



Painted metal shoe trees are among the old favorites in gifts that appear in new guise this year. On a black pair grotesque faces promise smiling and faithful service to a master, and on a blue pair pretty pink blossoms bespeak a mistress' approval.

Lo, the Poor Indian



Great will be the elation of the small boy who wakes up on Christmas morning to find himself in possession of an Indian camp, with trees, tepees, men and squaws on a green-covered board. These are all made of crepe paper and wire, which is wound with strips of the paper to fashion the figures. Small canoes may be made of paper or real birch bark, blankets of bits of cloth and war bonnets of tiny feathers or paper.

Clever Sewing Bag

A clever work bag that every woman will like has made its appearance among novelties for Christmas. It may be used as a sewing bag or to carry one's knitting, or other pickup work, to the club or elsewhere. Nothing more unusual than an old straw hat crown, some figured silk and lamp shade or bead fringe is needed to make it. The straw bottom is lined with plain sateen and the top closed with a silk cord.

Scroll Saw Toys

All kinds of figures—animals or children, cut from printed crepe paper, make captivating toys when pasted to thin board and sawed out with a scroll saw. Little Boy Blue and a dancing girl are pictured. They are glued to little wooden blocks.

Circuit Good for Volume and Range

Three-Tube Receiver That Will Equal or Surpass Five-Tube Sets.

By CARLTON E. BUTLER
(Member American Institute of Electrical Engineers and Institute of Radio Engineers.)

Properly constructed, with good parts and workmanship, the variometer coupled radio frequency receiver is surpassed only by the superheterodyne for efficiency and range. Selectivity is remarkable and the set will not radiate energy while the tubes are controlled at their proper operating point by the potentiometer.

It has been repeatedly demonstrated that tuned radio frequency amplification is essential to provide sufficient selectivity to tune through the maze of broadcasting stations now on the air, and to give sufficient volume to operate a loud speaker on distant stations. At the present time the majority of radio receivers incorporate tuned radio frequency in some form or other.

Some Advantages.

The circuit described in this article uses a combination of fixed condensers and inductive tuning, in place of the usual arrangement of fixed transformers and variable condensers. Variometers are used instead of condensers for tuning, and the receiver is stabilized with a series of variable resistances from the grids of the tubes to the negative filament lead. The following parts will be needed:

Three variometers capable of tuning from 200 to 550 meters.

Three .001 mfd. mica fixed condenser.

One 200,000-ohm noninductive variable resistance.

Two centralab noninductive variable grid leaks.

One 400-ohm centralab noninductive noiseless potentiometer.

One each 30-ohm and 6-ohm rheostats of centralab type.

Three sockets.

Binding posts, wire, etc.

The resistances are very important, the one on the first tube should be capable of going below 10,000 ohms. For this purpose the 200,000-ohm radiohm, is recommended for the first R1.

For Noiseless Reception.

For noiseless reception it is essential that the noninductive variable grid-leaks be used for R1 on the second and third tubes. Once the leaks have been adjusted so that oscillation does not occur at any setting of the dials, further adjustment will not be required except with the potentiometer, which controls volume and will be found very helpful in tuning in distant stations.

As the first two tubes are controlled by a single rheostat, it need be but half of the resistance required for operating a single tube. A 30-ohm rheostat will control the first two tubes if they are of the UV 199, C 299, UV 201-A or C 301-A type. A 6 ohm will be the proper size for the detector if the one ampere UV 200 or C 300 detector is to be used. A 30-ohm is best for the other types of tubes.

Stations will generally come in over the first part of the first variometer dial and over the latter half of the second and third dials.

Interchangeable Apparatus

In the majority of cases, condensers of like capacity and audio transformers of approximately the same ratio are interchangeable. The manufacturer's name makes little difference, providing he is thoroughly reliable. Different makes of rheostats, sockets, jacks and other small items can also be substituted one for another without trouble.

New Receiver on Market

A new form of telephone receiver for radio use has appeared on the market in Germany. It is very light and the receiver proper is surrounded by a thin cap of rubber, the opening in which is large enough to permit the whole contrivance being hung on the ear.

Using Auto Battery

If you use an auto battery for radio work, make connections easier by putting binding posts on the terminals. Drill a hole in each terminal and solder the head of a machine screw in it. Then a thumb screw can be fitted to the screw.

THE SEASONS

Winter perhaps took the lead of all the seasons. In the winter the snow came and the woods were so beautiful. In the winter great, exciting gales blew and ice came and formed over the ponds and made them perfect for skating or ice-boating.

There Could Be Skiing.

Hills became packed with snow and there could be skiing and snow-shoeing or long walks in that wonderful air of winter which seemed to give one health to last all through the year.

Sometimes the storms in the winter were too wild—but there was something glorious about winter. It was so strong and it made others feel strong, too. And there was such a variety of weather in the winter.

One day it might storm and the next it would be as quiet and mild as could be. That was the way winter behaved.

One day it might snow and the next it might rain. Oh, yes, winter had plenty of ideas.

Spring was not without ideas though. Spring could be so quiet and so warm and almost affectionate. And then spring would turn around and blow up with cold winds and air that went through you even more than the really cold air of winter.

Spring did such unexpected things. Spring behaved like a young child, very charming and sweet and lovable and then surprisingly naughty quite suddenly.

But spring brought with it the secrets of the woods—little mayflowers hidden under leaves, violets in marshy woods, star of Bethlehem flowers, wild berry blossoms, lady's slippers.

Spring brought them along and didn't shove them at you but made them all the lovelier the way you had to go and search a bit for them yourself.

Spring brought buds and trees, thoughts of gardens; spring had plenty of ideas.

Summer was much older than spring. Summer knew more than spring. Summer was not so apt to give sudden surprises from warmth to chilliness, and yet summer could do a few tricks, too. Summer could bring with it periods of rain or too little rain. Even summer behaved quite without reason at times. And summer could blow up a storm, too.

Summer's breezes tossed sweet scents to each other. "Here, take a whiff of this delicate clover," said one breeze to another.

"I should like to," said the breeze. "But let me blow you a whiff of this delicate sweet fern."

"I," said a cool, long, refreshing breeze, "want to have you whiff this salt air I bring with me."

"Oh," said the others, "how good it is."

"Here," said still another breeze, "I bring a whiff of the spruce trees."

"Delicious," the other breezes said.

"Let's mix them," said yet another. And they mixed the sweet scents of the summer. Nature's scents always mix.

Summer had plenty of ideas.

Autumn, though, was the artist of the family. Great flaming colors autumn bore along with it, and yet so artistic was autumn that none of the colors clashed. They were as gay as could be, as brilliant and vivid and extraordinary and yet none of them failed to harmonize.

Secrets of the Woods.

Autumn could be bad too. Autumn could sing the most shivery of dirges on the late evenings and send the brittle and faded leaves hurrying, scurrying, now this way, now that.

Autumn could turn from a day of golden sunshine and heavenly sky reflections into a day of sullen rain and drenching cold. But again autumn would bring a bracing cold, and take great long strides through the country, magic paint brush in hand.

Autumn, too, had plenty of ideas.

In fact, not a season was without them.

Her Strong Point

A little girl of five was entertaining the callers while her mother was getting ready. One of the ladies remarked to the other with a significant look:

"Not very p-r-e-t-t-y," spelling the last word.

"No," said the child quickly, "but awfully s-m-a-r-t."

Backache Wearing You Out?

Every day find you miserable with backache? Suffer sharp, stabbing pains? Feel lame and stiff—always tired, nervous and dispirited? Then look to your kidneys! Your kidneys are the blood filters. Perhaps they have failed to properly rid the blood of body poisons. Naturally, then, you suffer the injurious effects of this slow poisoning.

Don't risk neglect! If your kidneys need help, use Doan's Pills. No other kidney diuretic is so well recommended nor so successful. Ask your neighbor!

A California Case

Mrs. J. F. Buell, 1534 Orizaba Ave., Long Beach, Cal., says: "I had a bearing-down pain across my kidneys and a sharp, stinging pain through my back. My back became lame and I always felt tired. I had headaches and dizzy spells when tiny specks flickered before my eyes, blurring my sight. My kidneys were also disordered. But after using Doan's Pills I was rid of the attack."

DEMISE OF JOHN KICKHAM

Last Friday Mrs. John Kickham, who has been visiting her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Kickham, in Mission Beach for a month or so, was suddenly called home to East St. Louis, Missouri, on account of the somewhat sudden demise of her husband, John Kickham, a prominent and highly respected citizen of that city. He had reached the age of sixty-six years and had long been a victim of chronic diabetes, which caused his death. Besides his widow, two sons and a daughter survive him: Edward A. Kickham, Mission Beach; M. J. Kickham, of East St. Louis, and Mrs. J. F. O'Connell, of East St. Louis. The staff of "The Beach News," as well as a large number of friends of the Kickham family, extend sincere sympathy to them in their hour of bereavement.

ADVERTISING REDUCES EXPENSE

"Liberal use of advertising has contributed to make low rates possible and has shortened by one-half the time necessary to attain the present stage of electrical development in the United States," says W. H. Hodge, manager of advertising department of the Byllesby Engineering and Management Corporation of Chicago.

"Cellectively the third largest industry in the country, the utilities should be large advertisers. It is estimated that they are spending today an amount equal to about one-half of one per cent of their gross revenue in this way. From 65 to 75 per cent of their total advertising expenditures are in the newspapers."

Advertising keeps down and reduces rates by creating market value, which in turn permits the economies of mass production and lower distribution expense.

Caloric Requirements of the Child

DIETITIANS declare that the average boy or girl of four years should receive about forty calories a pound of body weight per day. The average weight of a child of four years is forty pounds. Therefore the total caloric requirement would be approximately 1,600 calories. Calory is merely the name for a certain measure of heat derived from the burning of food.

Necessarily, the caloric requirement of the child is dependent on his temperament, since a child who plays hard and long requires more nourishment than one who leads a quieter life. Rate of growth also has a bearing on caloric requirements. The child who is growing rapidly should be given more food to meet his caloric needs than the boy or girl whose growth is normal.

Mothers know the daily diet should consist of the essential foodstuffs, protein, carbohyrates, fats, minerals and water. The important thing for her is to learn the foods that contain these essentials in a balanced diet. Below is a well-balanced menu for any child six years old compiled by an authority on home economics.

ONE DAY'S MENU FOR SIX-YEAR-OLD CHILD.

Breakfast.

6 stewed prunes	120 calories
½ cupful cream of wheat	85 calories
Served with half cream (6 tbsp.) and half evaporated milk	140 calories
1 slice buttered toast	150 calories
1 cup cocoa made with evaporated milk	150 calories
	645 calories

Luncheon at School.

Baked potato and butter	200 calories
½ cupful spinach	25 calories
1 baked apple (1 tbsp. sugar, ½ tbsp. butter)	200 calories
1 glass milk	160 calories
1 slice bread buttered with ½ tbsp. butter	100 calories
	685 calories

Afternoon Luncheon at School.

1 orange	100 calories

Dinner.

1 small piece broiled steak (2¼ x 2½ x ½)	75 calories
½ cupful mashed potato	100 calories
2-3 cupful lima bean soup made with evaporated milk	75 calories
1 glass milk, orange drink	160 calories
	510 calories
Total	1,840 calories

Children often become wearied of drinking plain milk. Mixing their milk with fruit juices is a welcome change. Following is the recipe for a refreshing milk drink: Mix ⅞ cupful orange juice, ¼ cupful evaporated milk, three teaspoonfuls of sugar, ½ teaspoonful of lemon juice and a few grains of salt. Shake well in a fruit jar before serving.

Housework Worth $900 a Year, but—

Leonora Z. Meder.

Nine hundred dollars a year is the value of the average housewife's services in the home, and statistics show there are 20,700,000 women engaged in housework, according to Mrs. Leonora Z. Meder, prominent Chicago woman lawyer and economist.

"The wife," said Mrs. Meder, who was formerly commissioner of public welfare of Chicago, "is an executive, purchasing agent, budget expert, and producer rolled into one. The successful home maker studies food values. She arranges her budget so that the food she buys will have all the necessary body building qualities.

"The woman who would keep down her food bill will do better to spend her money on milk and green vegetables than on butter, though butter is one of the best sources of the essential food element, vitamin A. There are butter substitutes, but nothing can take the place of milk and vegetables.

"Milk, food experts say, is the most nearly perfect food. Science solved the problem by inventing evaporated milk, which is simply fresh cow's milk sterilized in cans and with sixty per cent of the water removed. Because evaporated milk is of double the richness of ordinary market milk, many housewives dilute it half and half with water for cooking purposes. Keeping longer than ordinary milk, there is no waste from souring. Then, too, it is cheaper.

"Savings also can be made on meat. Cheaper portions of beef skillfully cooked are highly nutritious and often better tasting than portions which cost more. The shoulder, breast and stew meat of lamb are excellent. Pork shoulders, feet, tails, heart, spareribs and hocks are in the same category."

LONG LIFE HELPED BY EATING AND WORKING AND "MOVIE" HABIT

Failure of the present day young women to get acquainted with the old-fashioned idea of house work and their tendency to trifle with all sorts of new diets makes them old, in the opinion of Mrs. Marie Knuepple, 91, who recently won a health and beauty prize at Chicago.

"If you want to be young and spry at 91," she explains, "you have to leave off the new-fangled ideas of dieting and go in for three square meals a day, have housework as an antidote and make the movies a habit."

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

THE DREADED DEFAMER

TURN to the right, to the left, or proceed straight ahead, bent upon the intention of minding your own business, and in a little while you'll come face to face with the dreaded defamer.

He is waiting for the true and the faithful in every drawing room, in the palaces of business, in the blazing salons of society and likely as not in the home.

The old father whose back is bent from bearing the burdens of years; the sweet-faced mother whose hair is streaked with silver; the young man who is just launching his career; the beaming bride and groom, in fact everybody who is worth while is liable to meet the nimble-tongued foe of mankind and get a merciless lashing.

This defamer, be it said with sorrow, is on intimate speaking terms with those who are making the world brighter and better, while he is engaged in sowing seed of darkness and evil.

The noblest men and women and even the dimpled-faced children whose countenances are alight with life and love and laughter, are targets for his poisoned arrows, which frequently cause as much mischief to a community as would an invading army.

Hearts are broken, characters are blackened, hopes are shattered and lives destroyed by this infamous traducer who goes up and down the world wearing a smile on his face and a dagger in his belt.

Nothing that serves his purpose escapes his far-reaching eyes.

He opens old family closets while masquerading as a friend and reaches in to pull out a skeleton. Not content with this he goes to grass covered mounds in far-off church yards to resurrect scandals which even the old wanton world itself would charitably forget.

His unpardonable acts are feared as a scourge, but in some way or another he manages to elude detection, possibly because there are always itching ears waiting feverishly to hear his tales.

To get rid of this dreaded defamer shun him, or stand up boldly and tell him what is thought of him.

But who has the courage to do this? Who does not fear that he or she will be the next victim to be dragged down to ruin or disgrace?

But even with this fear torturing our hearts, we ought to warn our friends and our loved ones of the terrible enemy seeking to devour them and paint his portrait so truthfully that everybody would know him at a glance.

WHO SAID

"Patience is the key of content."

THESE words are from the lips of one of the great religious teachers of the world, the man who founded Islamism or Mohammedism—Mohammed.

The career of Mohammed is the story of another genius of history who earned fame by running counter to the wishes of his family. It was their intention that he become a man of business. They died, however, when he was but a lad and Mohammed's upbringing fell to the lot of an uncle. With the latter he journeyed through Arabia and Syria and acquired much in an educational way that had been denied him as a child.

When Mohammed reached the age of twenty-five his uncle recommended him to a wealthy widow to act as her agent. In this instance he discharged his trust so well that the woman married him and thus he was placed in easy circumstances and permitted to live comfortably while planning the religious campaign he was later to lead.

Mohammed was forty years old before he announced his mission as the apostle of a new religion. It was shortly after the year 600 A. D. when he told his family of the conviction which had come to him. His wife and his cousin were among his first converts and his sect grew. Then came the death of his first converts and things went against him.

In the year 622 the prophet was forced to flee for his life. He found an asylum at Medina where many of his followers assembled and from that point they set out on their wars of conquest which resulted in spreading Islamism throughout the East.

SHADOWS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

RELIGION'S a comfort, wherever you go,
However you plod or you plan;
But, second to that, there's another I know,
A similar blessing to man.
It puts into Christmas a good deal of joy,
It puts in Thanksgiving the "thank,"
And, starting a New Year there's nothing, my boy,
Like a thousand or so in the bank.

Some day Mr. Trouble comes fooling around,
When things are apparently right;
For many a morning some fellow has found
His henroost was robbed in the night.
Whatever the trouble that happens to you,
You won't have to walk any plank,
Whatever the worry you'll worry it through,
With a thousand or so in the bank.

When sickness comes rapping on anyone's door,
The malady little or great,
There's something there's plenty of sympathy for,
Yes, sympathy early and late,
And yet there is nothing the neighbors can do
Right then, to be perfectly frank,
Will come in as handy in pulling you through
As a thousand or so in the bank.

No doubt there are many desirable things
We all of us covet today;
But what of tomorrow—who knows what it brings?
Let's lay a few dollars away!
For life has its changes, we rise and we fall,
And fortune plays many a prank,
And then you will need what you need most of all—
A thousand or so in the bank.

Burglar Takes About Everything but House

San Antonio, Texas.—"He left me the house," Mrs. Emfla Mendez told police after a burglar's visit. "Maybe he would have taken that if he had had the time," she added. The police were able to appreciate the victim's feeling after they checked the burglar's loot.

It consisted of a mattress, two quilts, a phonograph, 50 records, a gold ring, 12 yards of gingham, three shirt waists and $30 in cash.

RICH NOBLEMAN IS CHURCH THIEF

Attempts to Steal Gems Adorning Virgin.

Rome.—The sequel to the recently attempted burglary of the precious jewels adorning the miraculous virgin in Saint Agostinus church here rivals the brightest of detective yarns.

The police of Rome and Milan have discovered that the sacreligious would-be thief is no less a personage than Count Jose Dellamota, a South American patrician, who tried to steal the treasures of the virgin, because he is afflicted with a morbid longing to possess the best specimens of Christian art.

The count, who was born in Mexico, is very rich, and has passed the last thirteen years in the most exclusive circles here. He gradually has gained renown for his expert knowledge of jewels, particularly emeralds and pearls. He has been consulted by traders from all over the world.

His wife, who first learned of his arrest from the newspapers, revealed his real identity to the astonished society circles, who did not think to connect the church thief with the aristocratic Dellamota.

"He must have gone mad," she declared. "He was aways such a pious Catholic, and even now he is writing a volume about Italy's famous sanctuary, in the Spanish tongue."

She showed newspaper men the count's manuscripts, which prove his vast culture and expert knowledge. Searching the Milan home of Count Dellamota, the police found the unset jewels in paper envelopes, which they say are worth huge sums. Three years ago Milan detectives suspected him of being implicated in the theft of precious relics of Saint Ambrose at Milan, but were unable to prove his guilt. Society is thrilled by the affair.

Ten-Year-Old Girl Dies Saving Four Children

New York.—Four thousand penpies from public school No. 126 in Brooklyn went to buy flowers for a small coffin at No. 80 Greene street. Three hundred children gathered in the rain before St. John's Lutheran church and watched with large eyes the carrying out of the coffin, followed by a silent man and woman.

Recently Helen Smith, ten, had been one of the school group. She was a motherly child. Instinctively she looked out for the younger.

She was shepherding a group of four from the kindergarten when a five-ton truck bowled along near Franklin and Oak streets. Helen darted forward. The four were pushed to safety. But Helen perished.

In fiction, by all the proprieties, the four would have been singled out at the funeral. But life doesn't work out that way. The four who were saved ran off whimpering and nobody got their names.

So it happened that four anonymous lives were the finest decoration of the coffin which Helen's parents followed through the drizzle to Mt. Olivet cemetery to Maspeth, Queens.

Teacher Braves Mad Dog to Save Charges

Austin, Texas.—Miss Kate Lacy, a teacher in an orphans' home at Corsicana, and 20 of her charges in the home, arrived at the state Pasteur institute here, all victims of bites from a dog afflicted with rabies.

With them they brought a story of heroism on the part of their instructor that saved many more of the children from attacks by the dog, holding it while the children reached safety in the seclusion of the home.

R. B. Walthall, member of the state board of control, who investigated the terrible ravages committed by the rabid animal, said the children were playing on the home campus when the dog made its appearance, attacking one after another of the children.

Miss Lacy, some distance away, heard their cries. She ran to their aid, grasping the dog and grappling with it while the children fled. The dog buried its teeth into her arms and hands, but she held on bravely and half-dragged, half-carried it across the campus to a covered box. With one free hand she lifted the cover and dropped the dog into the box.

Breitbart, whose exhibition consisted of pulling against two horses, bending iron bars and tearing horseshoes apart, succumbed to blood poisoning which developed from a small nail scratch.

YOUR Last Name

IS IT CAMPBELL?

WHEREVER there are Scotchmen there are pretty sure to be Campbells, and although there are various branches of the Scotch Campbell family with varying degrees of distinction attached to each, it is generally conceded by Scotchmen that it is something to be proud of to be a Campbell of any sort.

It is interesting to note that this ancient Scotch surname is derived from a nickname. The meaning is simply "wry mouth," and it must be supposed that the original Campbell had a mouth of this sort. Cameron, another distinguished Scotch name, has the meaning of "crooked nose."

In Great Britain there have been many distinguished Campbells—the most distinguished of all undoubtedly being Thomas Campbell, a poet who wrote during the first part of the last century.

MUNDAY—It is hard to account for the origin of these surnames of the days of the week. However, the fact that Monday is so much more usual than Tuesday or any of the other week days leads some authorities to suppose that Monday has some other origin, and that probably in some way those who bear the name acquired it from a place name of similar sound.

CARRINGTON—This is an old English name undoubtedly derived from one of several places in England so called. However, there are members of the family who prefer to think that it is derived from the French town, Charonton.

PULLMAN—It is generally believed that this is derived from "pull," with the significance of "pool," and man. Thus the name would have first been borne by one who lived near some pool of water.

Mother's Cook Book

By desiring what is perfectly good, even when we don't quite know what it is and cannot do what we would, we are part of the divine power against evil, widening the skirts of life, and making the struggle and darkness narrower.—George Eliot.

SOMETHING TO EAT

IN SMALL families where there are always leftovers, the cook must use much thought in arranging meals so that food is not wasted. Where there is a little roast beef left from the dinner, it will make another meal if combined with a few vegetables.

Into a well-greased baking dish put a layer of thinly sliced uncooked potatoes; over this layer put the leftover meat in neat slices or cut into uniform pieces, sprinkle with a thin layer of shredded onion and add any gravy that may be left from the roast; cover with a cupful or more of tomatoes, season well and put to bake in a slow oven for an hour or more. Serve from the dish. If lacking in tomatoes a few carrots may be added.

Hubbard squash is such a favorite vegetable, but the size prohibits a small family from indulging in a whole one. Cut it into halves or even quarters, turn the cut side down on a smooth surface in a cool place and it will keep for days. If any is left after cooking, it warms over equally well, adding a bit of cream to moisten it when serving.

Yorkshire Pudding.

Mix two cupfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two cupfuls of milk, and three well-beaten eggs; beat well and turn into greased pans, filling half-full and basting with the gravy from the roast. Serve around the roast as a garnish.

PARIS FAVORS ORNATE STYLING; FOOTWEAR REVEALS REAL ARTISTRY

ORNATE simplicity seems a somewhat contradictory phrase, we admit, yet one has but to view an exhibit of Paris-made frocks to be convinced of its reality. We Americans do not lay claim to the gift of achieving simplicity through elaborate detail. The art of so doing belongs peculiarly to the French couturier. A Parisian designer indulges in all manner of eccentric touches, and yet on the whole, an impression of simplicity is conveyed. For example, study the naive velvet gown shown to the left in the picture. There is everything there to make it appear elaborate, yet on the whole it is of quite girlish and unpretentious aspect. A band of brilliant satin traverses the front of this dress. The fichu collar and tie, the flare flounce which is to all appearance buttoned onto the skirt and the flaring sleeve are all points of importance in the season's modes.

TWO PARIS AFTERNOON FROCKS

Silver embroidery enhances the other frock, which is of heavy bois de rose crepe. Coral buttons in conjunction with silver embroidered bands embellish the flare in a front panel effect. Silver ornamentation has invaded every avenue of fashion. Silver kidskin, silver stitchery, silver metal cloth, silver ribbons and silver in every conceivable form, contribute a lively part throughout dress designing.

Newest styles from Paris give prominence to boleros and to irregular waistlines, always maintaining the flare to the skirt in ways unique and numerous. There is also a decided tendency toward princess effects with abrupt flare around the hem. The uneven hemline is also a feature of many a velvet dress.

Jumper models are now being developed in velvet and other fanciful materials, assuming a dressy appearance. This is contrary to the initial inspiration for the two-piece jumper with skirt, which in its beginnings was restricted to the realm of sports wear. Not so, at this writing, the jumper suit having taken on ornate details which make it eligible to the class of formal afternoon frocks. Such is the mood of a youthful afternoon frock, which is a version of the jumper model. It is done in deep wine velvet with fine steel bead embroidery. A Chinese tassel which falls from a handsome silver-stitched medallion at the front lower edge of the blouse, sustains the effect of dressiness. The skirt uses sections of the velvet with alternate plaited portions of heavy silk crepe.

What a rivalry exists between our headgear and our footwear. It is a question which is the more complicated in the choosing—that which we shall wear on our heads or that which we shall wear on our feet. It would seem, however, that the modern woman has brought the selective of her footwear down to a scientific formula which is somewhat like this—shoes "costly as thy purse can buy" with stockings either in flesh tones or a perfect match to the frock.

Many interesting types of footwear are being launched for the coming months. So-called two-leather shoes feature among leading styles. There are any number of smart effects in black with gray or tan trimmings, also brown with tan. A number of shops show patent leather shoes with details of green and tan lizard.

Attractive sports footwear manifests itself in novel sorts of which the shoe shown to the left in the picture is typical. This model is styled of brown and beige kidskin. Any tendency toward the prosaic which might be suggested by the thoroughly sensible heel is offset by the perky little bow ties, and the graceful strappings across the instep.

There is no arbitrary law in regard to heels which are either high or medium low. For practical wear the shoe stylist tells us that Cuban or Spanish heels are the proper thing. For dress, the mode calls for high heels. The tall narrow spike heel is extremely popular. Rounded toes are exploited rather than the long, narrow kind.

Very important among fashionable shoe types is the opera pump. The subject of pumps invariably brings up the vision of glittering Colonial buckles—this year to a dazzling degree. If Christmas wishes come true, of the giving of gorgeous buckles, cut steel or rhinestone, there will be no end. Nothing quite so "dolls up" one's costume as a pair of scintillating buckles on shapely exquisitely fitted pumps.

STYLISH FOOTWEAR

Whoever heard of wings on our feet, yet such is the miracle performed in shoecraft. The shoe that boasts wings is very appropriately called the sparrow model. See to the right in this picture. It is a model of black kidskin with four tiny white-tipped wing-like leather motifs sewed in at the sides.

Black satin pumps with Colonial steel buckles are a preferred type for dress wear. Velvet footwear is coming in for considerable attention, especially the black velvet pump. The return of beadwork is stressed on dainty shoes the paterning taking on the form of garlands and other fanciful conceptions.

For afternoon wear attractive one-strap low patent leather shoes are favored.

THE YELLOW TUFT

By DAVID B. FITZGERALD

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

THE new colonel at Fort Wingate, in the desert of northwestern New Mexico, was very unlike the veteran major, who had been a dozen years at the post, and their points of view differed in almost every conceivable particular.

As they sat one evening, at the close of a blazing, fiery day, in a corner of the long veranda of the commandant's quarters, the colonel discoursed on his favorite theme—which he had studied on Pennsylvania avenue, exactly eighteen hundred miles distant as the crow flies—"The only good Indian is a dead Indian," until the major began to revolve the question of applying for leave of absence. He hated argument—and there was not a pound of ice within two hundred miles.

Just then Sergt. James Maguire made an official report to the colonel, saluted, clicked his heels and was marching off, when the major brought him up standing with a word and requested him to tell the colonel what happened at the Little Chusca canyon. The sergeant flattened himself against the white weather-boarding, and in a deprecatory manner complied.

"Well, sir," he said, "it was at the time of the second Navajo uprising, with which, for pure devilishness, the first wasn't in it for a minute. About six o'clock one evening a ranchman came in from Manuelito with the news that the Navajos were out along the Arizona border, moving eastward and leaving an unpleasant trail. We mounted four companies and were off on the stroke of ten. But, Lord! we didn't dream what was ahead. When we halted at dawn next morning for breakfast, two half-breed Zuni scouts came in and told us that we were up against the whole Navajo nation, with its war-paint on in broad streaks.

"The captain, considered a bit, and then ordered us to saddle and mount. We thought that meant falling back on the fort, but it really meant going ahead and holding the Indians in check till reinforcements could come up. With half a dozen scouts a mile in advance, we rode westward.

"At nine o'clock we sighted a fairly good-sized bunch of Indians—about two to our one—but that was nothing in those days. They made off to the north, intending to ride around and get between us and the fort, so we clapped the spurs in and went after them. I don't remember a nastier ride. This desert is a warmish sort of a place at the best—that day it was a furnace. The sun was so blazing hot it raised fever blisters on our souls. One poor fellow went clean daft. We couldn't have been wetter or steamier if one of the post washerwomen had poured boiling water over us.

"We brushed the reds three times that day, first at Jewett's stage station, next at Yucca creek, and again at Gibson's, near the beginning of the foothills. Each time we rushed them, because there was nothing else to do, but they didn't stand worth a cent. Spotted Owl was the only Indian I ever knew who would stand out in the open and fight like a man, but he had too great a fancy for green paint. It drew the fire of every man within range; he had eight bullets in him the day he died.

"About two hours before sundown the reds halted in the mouth of the Little Chusca canyon. From their own standpoint, it was a beautiful place for a fight. The steep walls, a thousand feet high, protected their flanks. The gorge behind them ran back twenty miles into the mountains, and the floor of the canyon, near its mouth, was strewn with great boulders. An Indian just dotes on shooting through a crevice in the rocks.

"When our captain—it was the major, here—saw the situation, it worried him—begging his pardon—and he called the lieutenants aside for a talk. The upshot was that the captain made us a little speech, the gist of which was that we were not going to round up that bunch of reds, and might as well be going, as the real circus was to be down on the plains. But he said that before we left he would like to give the Indians in front a scare that would keep them from hanging on to our trail.

"We saw it meant crawling, and answered by slipping from our horses. We had half a mile to cover before the light failed, but the ground was covered with big rocks, and we crawled and dodged and made little runs, the reds taking snapshots, but doing no particular damage.

"A hundred and fifty yards from the mouth of the canyon we reached an open place, sand-floored and bare as the palm of your hand, except for one big boulder in the center. It would have been just simple suicide to try crossing. The lieutenant shook his head, and sent back a sketch of the ground to the captain.

"While we waited for instructions, I noticed two Indians behind the big boulder. It was a devil-may-care place to be, for if we charged they were done for, no matter what happened to us individually, and they had no way of knowing what we would do. They were safe enough for the time, so long as they kept behind the rock, and I sized them up as a couple of bucks anxious to distinguish themselves.

"'Billy Krim,' I said to the man next me, 'keep your sights on that big rock; there are a couple of reds behind it. Pass the word.'

"He nodded, squinting along his barrel. Presently he leaned over and laid his hand on the shoulder of Kelso, the man next beyond. I saw the two whispering together, and wondered, knowing they were not good friends. But, Lord bless you, sir, I was as unprepared as a child for what happened. The next moment I heard Kelso cry, 'I don't take a dare from no man, and least of all from you, Billy Krim.' Before I could more than rub my eyes, Krim and Kelso were up and running neck and neck for the rock, trailing their carbines and with their knives in their teeth. The lieutenant yelled to them to come back, as we all did, but if they heard they paid no attention.

"Well, sir, that famous charge of Krim and Kelso was over in less time than it takes to tell it. The reds in the mouth of the canyon must have thought we were trying to play some trick, for they held their fire until the men had almost reached the boulder. Then there were half a dozen sputtering shots, and Kelso went down on his face. Krim ran clear past the rock, turned, raised his carbine and fired. Then he clubbed his piece and closed in. There was another shot, and Krim, when we found him next morning, had a bullet through his lungs and was dead. Also the two reds, one shot in the eye and the other with his skull smashed. We always thought Krim must have gone mad with the heat that day.

"Of course, we couldn't think of drawing off and leaving the bodies of our men to be scalped. So the lieutenant sent a detail to bring up food and water, and we spent the night behind our shelters, watching the open space between us and the mouth of the canyon, with instructions to shoot at anything that moved. Soon after daybreak we discovered that the Indians had decamped up the gorge, and the lieutenant ordered half a dozen of us to bring in the bodies of Kelso and Krim."

"And you found them scalped?" It was the colonel who spoke. The major rubbed his hands softly together in the darkness.

"No, sir," answered the sergeant, "we found all four bodies, reds and our men alike, wearing the yellow tuft."

"The yellow tuft! What is that?" inquired the colonel.

"I think, sir," said the sergeant, "it is what you would call a decoration for bravery in action. When a Navajo is killed in battle, and his people can't bring his body in and bury it with honors, they try at any rate to give him the tuft. It is a little bunch of yellow feathers, sir, bound with a string and tied on the forehead. Krim and Kelso both had it. Some red had risked his life in crawling out to the boulder during the night—and he had not overlooked the fact that our fellows were also in the scrimmage. Under the circumstances, we decorated the two dead Indians with a cavalry button apiece, tied around their necks, and buried all four in the same grave."

Great Work Now Done by Plastic Surgeons

Patients are flocking to England from all parts of the world to avail themselves of the skill of Britain's plastic surgeons.

No greater surgical triumph was achieved during the World war than the building up of new faces on men whose features had been blown away or were so mutilated as to make the unfortunate soldiers unrecognizable.

Plastic surgery was known before the war, but was never used to such an extent as during the later stages of the conflict. Noses, jaws and cheeks were reconstructed out of pieces of flesh, bone and cartilage taken from other parts of the patient's body with entire success, and many men now walking about with features given to them by the surgeon would hardly have dared to venture forth a few years ago.

Plastic surgery performs a legitimate and most useful work in repairing the ravages of disease which affect the flesh and cartilages of the face, nose and ears, and in restoring good looks to the victims of accidents.

Fads there will always be, such as that of remodeling and reshaping the nose, which came into prominence a few years ago. Some of the operations undertaken for that purpose then were successful; others were not, for plastic surgery undertaken by surgeons skilled in that particular branch of medicine is a different thing from the operations of so-called "beauty-specialists."

Berlin Public Houses

Statistics show that the city of Berlin contains 16,350 restaurants and saloons. This represents a proportion of one public house for every 250 inhabitants. As most of these restaurants or saloons are located in the city proper, the proportion is really 1 to 116. The suburb of Steglitz can boast of being the most temperate of all Greater Berlin's districts, for there the proportion is only one public house to every 428 inhabitants.

Late Days for Witchcraft

At Landskron, Germany, a new instance of belief in witchery has developed among the peasants. When the cows ceased to give milk the peasants suspected witchcraft. Their suspicions fell upon an old woman supposed to be possessed of a devil. She was lured into a house and beaten and much of her hair was torn out. But that did not renew the supply of milk.

This woman's experience is typical of thousands. Ask any physician.

"And to think I was poisoning my own Baby!"

"I couldn't see why he didn't gain. I never dreamed that my constipation was responsible until the doctor told me.

"He explained that faulty or slow elimination of waste matter allowed poisons to form and be absorbed by the blood—and this meant tainted milk for baby.

"He prescribed the Nujol treatment and it made a world of difference to both of us. Now that I know how dangerous constipation is and how easily it can be prevented, I am never going to allow myself to get into that bad condition again."

Mothers are the best friends of Nujol. When precious new lives are at stake they seek the remedy that medical authorities approve because it is so safe, gentle and natural in its action. Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body.

Nujol helps in Nature's own way

Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination, without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol today and begin to enjoy the perfect health that is possible only when elimination is normal and regular.

DINNER AND DANCE AT SUNCREST LODGE

An enjoyable dinner and dance was held last Wednesday night by the combined personnel of the offices of the Community Building and Loan association, Southwest Union Securities corporation and Commonwealth Building company, at Suncrest lodge, near El Cajon. E. H. McMath served as toastmaster, and Judge W. C. Campbell, of the John P. Mills organization, was the principal speaker. Among the entertainers were a quartet organized in the offices and consisting of J. P. De Latour, M. P. Duffield, Harry Wright and D. W. Phillips; Elmer Umsted, pianist; and Mrs. M. E. Getting, reader. More than seventy attended the party in the spacious lodge, which was built by Jesse H. Shreve for social uses of the personnel of the companies of which he is an officer and director.

THOSE big red letter days on the calendar mean particularly sumptuous dinners to the average American housewife. Her family expects something in the nature of roast turkey, duck or chicken. Of course, the home manager doesn't want to serve the same thing each year and as a consequence, she spends hours in hunting recipes and planning new things in the menu line.

The appended menus for the holiday dinner and supper may prove a welcome change to your family.

Pumpkin Pie.

1¼ cupfuls pumpkin strained
⅞ cupful brown sugar
2 eggs
1 cupful evaporated milk
¼ cupful water
2 tbsp. orange juice
1 tsp. ginger
1 tsp. cinnamon
¼ tsp. salt

Add the sugar and seasoning to the pumpkin, then add the slightly beaten eggs, milk and water. Stir till well blended and pour in a deep crust-lined pan. Bake at 450 degrees Fahrenheit for first 10 minutes and 300 degrees Fahrenheit for 50 minutes.

Cauliflower au Gratin.

Remove leaves and trim off the stalk from large cauliflower. Soak in a solution of 1 tbsp. vinegar, 1 tsp. salt and 1 quart of water for 15 minutes to remove dirt and insects. Cook whole, stem up, in boiling salted water for seven minutes. Place cauliflower in an oiled baking dish, pour over a thin evaporated milk white sauce and cover with buttered crumbs and grated cheese. Brown in a moderate oven. This serves six.

Cream of Tomato Soup.

1 No. 3 can tomatoes
4 sprigs parsley
¼ tsp. thyme
¼ bay leaf
1 tsp. peppercorns
6 cloves
2 slices onion
2 tbsp. butter
1 tbsp. sugar
1½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. soda
2 cups evaporated milk diluted with
2 cups water
2 tbsp. flour

Make a white sauce of the diluted evaporated milk, the butter and flour. Cook the tomatoes with the seasonings for five minutes and strain. There should be 3⅛ cups of pulp. Add soda to pulp and combine with the hot white sauce. Pour immediately into thermos bottle.

Whipped Cream Sauce.

Three-fourths cup evaporated milk, 1 cup whipping cream, ¾ cup powdered sugar.

Chill the cream and evaporated milk. Combine and whip until stiff. Fold in the sugar and keep chilled until ready to serve.

There's Only One Crop Of Land

AND THAT'S GONE!

"The fertile lands have now passed into private ownership. The public land remaining after years of intensive homesteading may be regarded as valueless for agriculture."

(Extract from the annual report of Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior.)

There's Only One Point Loma

AND THAT'S GOING!

Desirable residential properties are to be found in all parts of California, but there is a definite limitation to the number of view lots on Point Loma, between San Diego Bay and the Pacific Ocean.

My associates and myself control most of them. They are being purchased rapidly by far-seeing investors, and values are thereby increasing daily. You owe it to yourself and to your family to make an early investigation of Point Loma's investment possibilities.
